Beautiful 1820 brick Georgian style home on a large fenced lot. Constructed of handmade brick made on site and is attributed to John Dunn brick mason and master wood worker Conrad Burgess of Lewisburg.

It was first used as Union Academy, a boy's school, which was incorporated in 1820, and operated for forty years. In 1860 it was changed to Union College, but closed during the Civil War and never reopened. During the war it housed sick and wounded Confederates. During the restoration much of their graffiti was found under the old wallpaper.

This house is part of the Union Historic District and is listed National Register of Historic Places. It is also part of the Civil War Trails program and is on the Monroe County Historical Society walking tour.

The house has recently been restored with great attention given to preserve its 1820 charm. Many of the period lighting fixtures inside and out were handmade. Rare period Carpenter door locks were used on all doors. The floors on the east side of the house are original heart pine, the west side heart pine was covered in 1890 with oak. The entrance hall has paneled wainscoting and a beautiful paneled staircase with a mahogany handrail. The upstairs hall has a small laundry room and a door to the upstairs porch.
